Post-War Program

CANCER RESEARCH

ALTHOUGH cancer was not a major problem at any time during World War II, the Army Medical Department will continue study and treatment of the disease both for the Army's welfare and that of civilians.

The Army's program to combat the spread of cancer will be carried on at four Deep X-ray centers, where patients are now being treated. The program was announced formally today by Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, the Surgeon General.

"The highest incidence rate for cancer reported between the years of 1941 to 1945 was 0.34 per thousand per year or about three men out of every 10,000," General Kirk said.

General Kirk noted that at Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C., the number of patients treated daily had dropped from 100 to between 40 and 50. This is accounted for by the decrease in the strength of the Army.

A year ago hundreds of patients with cancer were being sent to Walter Reed for deep radiation therapy. Routine examinations at separation centers uncovered the malady hitherto unknown to the patient.

The other centers at Beaumont General Hospital, El Paso, Texas; Army and Navy Hospital, Hot Springs, Arkansas, and Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, California, also have X-ray machines capable of deep radiation therapy. Army hospitals do not specialize in treatment of cancer alone.

Tumors and cancers are more easily detected among soldiers than among civilians as the result of compulsory physical examinations and free medical care. This gives the Army a greater opportunity to treat and study cancer than is available in most civilian clinics.

Every week a mandatory tumor board convenes at Walter Reed. It consists of the Chief of Surgery, Laboratory, Pathology and Radiation Therapy services. They consider each case of cancer individually and recommend the type of treatment. This may be surgery, X-ray therapy, radium therapy or chemotherapeutic agents. Chemotherapeutic agents which may be used are diamine drugs, hormones or nitrogen mustard perfected during the war at Edgewood Arsenal. A similar program exists in all such centers of the Army.

Walter Reed General Hospital, has one of the few million volt roentgen therapy machines in the world. Of these, the apparatus at Walter Reed is the smallest, most compact and most flexible. It is as mobile and as easy to operate as the 200 kilovolt X-ray machine to be seen in many hospitals. The million volt machine is set up in a concrete room with walls three feet thick. The door to the chamber is of lead one inch thick and the window through which the doctors may direct and observe treatment is composed of two panes of special glass with a volume of special fluid between.

Plan Early Action On Army Retirement Law

A determined campaign to secure early action on the bill for the retirement of Army personnel with their war time ranks, and pay based on those ranks, is underway in Congress.

While legislation giving war rank and pay to retired personnel of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, was enacted last session, similar authority for the Army died with the 79th Congress after having been passed by the House of Representatives and reported out favorably by the Senate Military Committee. It failed to come to a vote in the Senate when Senator Johnson of Colorado and Senator Hill of Alabama objected to its consideration.

This week Representative Sikes (D. Fla.) and Representative Overton Brooks (D. La.) reintroduced bills which they had had before the 79th Congress.

Representative Sikes' new bill (HR 539) is identical with the measure as it passed the House last year, providing for retirement of Regular personnel with their war time ranks, a graduated retirement for officers of the National Guard and Reserves, a system of forced elimination for the Army, all of which was sponsored by the War Department, plus a system of annual reexamination of personnel retired for disability with a view to readjusting their status if their disability should improve or disappear.

Mr. Sikes, who will be a member of the new Armed Services Committee, told the ARMY and NAVY JOURNAL that he plans to press for action on the retirement bill as soon as the House committee is organized for action.

"This bill should have been enacted in the last session," Representative Sikes said. "It is a grave injustice to the thousands of Army personnel who are forced to retire in lower ranks (some as enlisted men) after having served their (Please turn to Next Page)

Service Budgets

A total of 11.1 billion dollars for the military functions of the War and Navy Departments was asked of Congress this week in President Truman's budget estimates for the fiscal year 1948.

In his discussion of the Service budgets, President Truman said:

"The expenditure estimate of 11.1 billion dollars in 1948 for the Army and Navy for military purposes reflects the reductions from the current fiscal year in the number of military personnel and in war-liquidation outlays—such as mustering-out payments (reduced by 370 million dollars), contract termination (700 million dollars), and surplus property handling. On the other side, the estimate reflects greater procurement in the fiscal year 1948, as war inventories cease to be available to supply current needs.

"The estimated expenditures of 6.7 billion dollars for the War Department in the fiscal year 1948 include 132 million dollars for public works under supplemental legislation. The Navy expenditures of 4.4 billion dollars also include 77 million dollars for ship construction and public works under supplemental legislation. In both instances the objective is to return to the peacetime procedure of obtaining specific legislative authority for these programs.

"Taken together, the War and Navy Department expenditures estimated for the fiscal year 1948 provide for an average military strength of 1,641,000 men and officers. Of this, Army strength is projected at 1,070,000 throughout the year; Navy and Marine strength will begin the year at 508,000 and average 571,000. These figures compare with an average strength in the fiscal year 1947 of 2,108,000. Pay, subsistence, travel, welfare, training, clothing, and medical expenditures for military personnel are estimated at 5.2 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1948, as against 6.7 billion dollars in the current year. Average annual costs per man for these purposes—about 3,100 dollars in 1948—have increased markedly since VJ-Day. Fully 45 percent of Army and Navy expenditures in 1948 are in this category.

"Expenditures by the War and Navy Departments for all other military purposes are estimated at 5.9 billion dollars in the fiscal year 1948. This sum covers procurement, re- (Please turn to Page 447)

Unified Service Group Plans General Survey

Organization of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, under the chairmanship of Senator Chan Gurney, of South Dakota, was completed this week.

The new committee has only 13 members as against a total of 36 in the former Naval and Military Committees which are now combined in the new one.

The House has definitely decided to combine its Service committees, but has not yet taken action to select the membership. This, it is understood, will be done Monday, 13 Jan., when Representative Andrews of New York will be selected chairman.

Following his official selection as Chairman of the Senate Committee, Senator Gurney has been the recipient of calls from Secretary of War Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, as well as from many high ranking officers of the Army and Navy who extended their congratulations to him and discussed their legislative problems. Among those calling upon him this week were Lt. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Director of Information of the War Department, and one of the Department's principle exponents of a single department of defense; Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons and Brig. Gen. Miles Reber, chief and member respectively, of the legislative liaison division of the War Department General Staff.

Senator Gurney, despite a broken ankle sustained in a fall at his home Tuesday, plans to push ahead with the work of his committee. He called a meeting for Monday, 13 Jan., at which the group will be organized and general policies decided upon. While these policies have yet to be officially adopted, it is understood that the plan is, to precede the consideration of actual legislation by a period in which leaders of all the Armed Services will be asked to appear and present the general picture of their situation and their needs. This would be a sort of "indoctrination" for the committee members, none of whom has had detailed experience in more than one service.

Senator Gurney told the ARMY and NAVY JOURNAL that he does not plan to have subcommittees for the Army, Navy, or Air Forces, for the time being. At the outset, at least, he said, he would rather have all the members hear all the evidence from all the Services, so that every member will have a well rounded knowledge of the agencies of National Security.

The Chairman said that the Navy has informed him that they have about 300 bills ready for submission. He said that he asked them not to send any of a controversial nature to his committee for a while. The War Department, he said, has given him no details as to its legislative program.

The Armed Services Committee will take over the old quarters of the Naval Committee, which are more commodious than those allotted to the Military Committee. The committee will have, Senator Gurney said, a Naval Captain and an Army Colonel as liaison officers.

Of the former Military Committee, four Republicans, Senators Gurney, Bridges, Robertson, Wilson, and, of the former Naval Committee, two, Senators Salton- (Please turn to Back Page)

Military Justice Report

New York Sun—"The specific criticisms of Army courts martial in the report of the Advisory Committee on Military Justice were bound to win more attention than the general observation that 'in practice the innocent are rarely convicted and the guilty seldom acquitted'."

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—"This moderate and objective report should help clear up the violent criticism and public hostility toward Army justice if Secretary Patterson adopts the recommendations."

Boston Press Herald—"It is noteworthy that the Bar Association committee criticized most severely the attempt at control of courts by commanding officers; hence its proposal that the law member and defense counsel of a general court-martial be a member of the Judge Advocate General's Department."

Los Angeles Times—"The chief difficulty in the controversy about Army courts seems to be in the confusion of the terms 'justice' and 'fairness.' There is a deep distinction and the Army has gained in the quarrel when some of its critics have attacked principles instead of practices."

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot—"The committee's report provides what has been lacking in the long controversy to date—a careful analysis of the flaws in the present administration of military justice and recommendations for their correction by impartial experts in both the theory and practice of law."

Dallas News—"It has found some fire for so much smoke but in the main finds that the Army's courts martial system, like the world, is less at fault than are the people within it."

St. Louis Star-Times—"Beneath the modulated praise for the theory of military justice runs as sharp a criticism of practice as any G. I. could wish."

Louisville Courier-Journal—"It is assumed that the Army, having asked for this expert report, will accept its findings. The U. S. Army will be stronger both in war and peace if the indicated steps are taken to assure justice for every man, from the buck private to the five-star general."

Cleveland Plain Dealer—"The American Bar Association committee has performed for this nation and, more especially, for the nation's army, a distinguished service by its painstaking investigation of the army court martial system and by its temperate, well considered recommendations for reforms in that system."

Raleigh News and Observer—"The committee makes several wise suggestions, including the presence of enlisted men on courts trying enlisted men and better supervision of courts martial, with commanding officers shorn of some of their present powers."

High-Level Schools

The mission, scope and necessary qualifications for attendance at the National War College, Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Armed Forces Staff College and Command and Staff College are recapitulated and given in detail in War Department Circular 378.

The National War College, whose mission is to prepare selected Ground, Air and Naval officers for the exercise of command and the performance of joint staff duties in the highest echelons of the armed forces, also endeavors to promote the development of understanding between high echelons of the armed forces and those other agencies of government which are an essential part of a national war effort.

The scope of instruction at the institution is detailed in the circular as follows:

3. SCOPE. The scope of instruction will include:

a. Study of the interests and objectives of the United States and the interests and objectives of other powers in order to understand the formulation of United States policy and the best feasible means of implementing it by methods short of war.

b. Study of the United Nations, regional pacts, and bilateral and multilateral agreements as a means of avoiding war and furthering peace and national security.

c. Examination of the implications of atomic energy and other new weapons in the fields of national strategy and war potential, international relations, and world order.

d. Analysis of the nature and interdependence of the factors of national power of the United States and other states.

e. Study of—

(1) The military force necessary to implement national policy in peace and war.
(2) Strategy and the integration of military policy and foreign policy.
(3) The impact of science and technology upon the armed forces.
(4) War planning and the employment of joint forces on the Joint Expeditionary Force and higher levels.

The other three high-level colleges are treated in the same manner in the circular, with the closing notation that the provisions of the circular govern in any case of conflict with previous instructions.

Naval Justice Reforms

The Navy Department will ask Congress to enact changes in the Articles for the Government of the Navy, and is now preparing a revised edition of Naval Courts and Boards, the naval law manual.

Changes in both volumes will be based on recent studies on the equity of Naval justice carried on by Dr. Arthur Ballantine and Commo. Robert J. White (ChC), USNR, at present dean of the Catholic University law school. Commo. White's report was released this week.

Commo. White stated his belief in the fairness of the courts, but recommended improvements in court procedure, more emphasis on legal training for officers, and revisions in AGN and Courts and Boards.

His study was based on personal interviews with 500 men convicted by courts martial, each of whom was asked, "Do you think you received a fair trial?" Dr. White reported that 410 thought they did.

Void Court Martial

Because a military court deprived the defendant of his constitutional rights, the Court of Claims of the United States has voided the action of a court martial in convicting a Second Lieutenant within five hours after charges had been served on him.

The Court of Claims decided on 6 Jan. that it does have jurisdiction in such a case. It found that 2nd Lt. Sidney Shapiro, AUS, when convicted on 3 Sept. 1943, was denied rights due him under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution; namely, the right to prepare his defense, and the opportunity to have counsel of his choice.

Lieutenant Shapiro was convicted of violating the 96th Article of War, in that while serving as a defense lawyer, he had affected a "delay in the orderly progress" of a court martial, by substituting an innocent soldier in place of the accused in order to demonstrate a mistake in identification by the prosecuting witness, an assault victim.

After the substitute defendant was identified as the attacker, and was convicted, Lieutenant Shapiro informed the court of the deception, and the real defendant was brought to trial and convicted. Several days later, at 1240, Lieutenant Shapiro was served with charges and notified that he would be tried at 1400 that day. Although he was unable to obtain counsel of his choice and moved for a stay to prepare his case, he was tried and convicted by 1730.

Effect of the Court of Claims decision was to entitle Lieutenant Shapiro to back pay amounting to the difference in pay and allowances of a lieutenant and a private between the date of his dismissal, 9 Jan. 1944, and his discharge for physical disability on 8 March 1945.

January Officer Integration

A small increment of applicants for commissions will be brought into the Regular Army late this month, Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Administration, War Department General Staff, said this week.

The increment will be only a small proportion of the 25,000 authorized for the second integration program.

As of 6 Jan. over 60,000 persons had indicated desire for Regular Army commissions, but the papers of the majority of these have not yet been processed. Resubmissions received as of that date total 46,686 and new applications 14,191.

Regarding applicants for Regular Army commissions, the War Department has warned that it "is mandatory that the War Department be advised by the most expeditious means of any act of misconduct, disciplinary action, or any other act, omission, or undesirable character trait which would render an applicant undesirable for Regular Army commission." Applicable to such cases, the War Department pointed out, is an earlier directive, "Disposition of Subversive and Disaffected Personnel."

New Investigation Possible

Recommendation by the Senate Rules Committee of an indefinite extension of the life of the War Investigating Committee revives the possibility of investigation of the conduct of troops and military government overseas. The recommendation was one of the first acts of the Rules Committee this week.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) new investigating committee chairman, listed as a "possibility" the overseas investigation. The matter, he said, would be discussed with General of the Army George C. Marshall, new Secretary of State, before any decision was made.

Army Justice Revision

Representative Carl T. Durham (D. N.C.) this week introduced a bill to revise the Army Court martial system. The bill, he said, was drafted to incorporate the recommendations of the Investigating subcommittee of last sessions House Military Committee.

The bill also would give more authority and responsibility to the Judge Advocate General and would require law members on courts.

One provision of the bill would remove officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department from the promotion list and be given non-promotion list advancement similar to the medical department.

country in positions of high responsibility during the war. I was very disappointed at its defeat in the last Congress."

Meanwhile, the War Department is planning to resubmit its bill just as it was before the last Congress, with no changes. The Department, it is understood, will put its best efforts behind the measure, realizing that a great deal of harm is being done to Army morale by the fact that considerably better retirement privileges are being given the sea services.

Senator Johnson, who was the leader in holding up the bill in the last Congress, has not been reappointed to the Armed Services Committee. However, he told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that he is still opposed to the retirement bill, both as it pertains to the Regulars and to the Civilian components, and that he plans to express his opposition on the floor.

Senator Hill, who also opposed the measure, has been reappointed to the Services Committee, but it is understood that he is amenable to further discussion of the bill, particularly in view of the present discrimination between the services.

In reporting out the Sikes bill in the last session the House committee said: "It is not believed that any valid distinction exists between the type of service rendered by officers and enlisted men of the Army and the service rendered by officers and enlisted men of the Navy upon which naval personnel should be retired in temporary war grades while military personnel are retired in their permanent grades."

In announcing the joint staff, Admiral Towers emphasized that the plan is subject to change by his superiors, by himself during the coming month, or by Vice Adm. Louis Denfeld, who will succeed him on 2 Feb.

Avoid Weakness, Warns President

President Truman's warning, his address to Congress on 6 Jan., against permitting our Armed Forces to become weakened, met with most widespread approval among leaders of both parties in Congress.

That portion of the address treating of the National Defense follows:

"In 1946 the Army and Navy completed the demobilization of their wartime forces. They are now maintaining the forces which we need for national defense and to fulfill our international obligations.

"We live in a world in which strength on the part of peace-loving nations is still the greatest deterrent to aggression. World stability can be destroyed when nations with great responsibilities neglect to maintain the means of discharging those responsibilities.

"This is an age when unforeseen attack could come with unprecedented speed. We must be strong enough to defeat, and thus to forestall, any such attack. In our steady progress toward a more rational world order, the need for large armed forces is progressively declining; but the stabilizing force of American military strength must not be weakened until our hopes are fully realized. When a system of collective security under the United Nations has been established, we shall be willing to lead in collective disarmament, but, until such a system becomes a reality, we must not again allow our weakness to invite attack.

"For these reasons, we need well-equipped, well-trained armed forces and we must be able to mobilize rapidly our resources in men and material for our own defense, should the need arise.

"The Army will be reduced to 1,070,000 officers and men by 1 July 1947. Half of the Army will be used for occupation duties abroad and most of the remainder will be employed at home in the support of these overseas forces.

"The Navy is supporting the occupation troops in Europe and in the Far East. Its fundamental mission—to support our national interests wherever required—is unchanged. The Navy, including the Marine Corps, will average 571,000 officers and men during the fiscal year 1948.

"We are encountering serious difficulties in maintaining our forces at even these reduced levels. Occupation troops are barely sufficient to carry out the duties which our foreign policy requires. Our forces at home are at a point where further reduction is impracticable. We should like an Army and a Navy composed entirely of long-term volunteers, but in spite of liberal inducements the basic needs of the Army are not now being met by voluntary enlistments.

"The War Department has advised me that it is unable to make an accurate forecast at the present time as to whether it will be possible to maintain the strength of the Army by relying exclusively on volunteers. The situation will be much clearer in a few weeks, when the results of the campaign for volunteers are known. The War Department will make its recommendation as to the need for the extension of Selective Service in sufficient time to enable the Congress to take action prior to the expiration of the present law on March 31st. The responsibility for maintaining our armed forces at the strength necessary for our national safety rests with the Congress.

"The development of a trained citizen reserve is also vital to our national security. This can best be accomplished through universal training. I have appointed an Advisory Commission on Universal Training to study the various plans for a training program and I expect that the recommendations of the Commission will be of benefit to the Congress and to me in reaching decisions on this problem.

"The cost of the military establishment is substantial. There is one certain way by which we can cut costs and at the same time enhance our national security. That is by the establishment of a single Department of National Defense. I shall communicate with the Congress in the near future with reference to the establishment of a single Department of National Defense.

"National security does not consist only of an army, a navy, and an air force. It rests on a much broader base. It depends on a sound economy of prices and wages, on a prosperous agriculture, on satisfied and productive workers, on a competitive private enterprise free from monopolistic repression, on continued industrial harmony and production, on civil liberties and human freedoms—on all the forces which create in our men and women a strong moral fiber and spiritual stamina.

"But we have a higher duty and a greater responsibility than the attainment of national security. Our goal is collective security for all mankind."

To be Commodores in the Navy for temporary service while serving as indicated and during any assignment commensurate with the rank of Commodore or until reporting for other permanent duty:

Commo. Albert T. Sprague, jr., while serving as Deputy Commandant of Armed Forces Staff College.

Commo. Wilbur E. Kellum (MC), while serving on the Staff (Medical) of the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet.

Commo. James W. Boundy, SC, while serving as Special Assistant to the Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Commo. Ernest M. Eller, while serving as Director of Public Information, Navy Dept.

Commo. Richard P. Glass, while serving as Director of Civil Relations, Navy Dept.

Commo. Charles T. Dickman, CEC, while serving as Superintending Civil Engineer, Areas IV and V.

Vice Adm. Sherwoode A. Taffinder, USN (Ret), to be placed on the Retired List with the rank of Vice Admiral.

Unified Command in Pacific

Unity of command has been achieved in the Pacific through creation of a joint Army-Navy staff under the Pacific commander, Admiral John H. Towers, who described the new set-up as a sure safeguard against another disaster such as Pearl Harbor.

In carrying out President Truman's order for coordination of forces in the area for which he is responsible, Admiral Towers assembled a staff composed of Lt. Gen. John E. Hull, commander of Army Ground Forces, Middle Pacific; Brig. Gen. Donald F. Stace, head of the Seventh Air Force based in Hawaii; and Vice Adm. Lynde McCormick, Deputy Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet.

Forces stationed on each outlying island in the Pacific area will be under operational control of one of the three elements of the area command to insure complete unity of command from the highest to the lowest echelon. The Pacific area includes the Hawaiian Islands, the Carolines, Palaus, the Marshalls, and the Gilberts.

"I cannot envisage any repetition of Pearl Harbor or a similar disaster under this plan," he added. "We will no longer need an investigation to find out who is responsible for decisions in this area. I'm it. This, as I see it, is unity of command. Members of my joint command staff will act as executive agents for me in carrying out policy decisions within our command area."

The new organization will be executive, with administration left to commanders of the separate services. It will include separate boards on the various levels, such as intelligence and communications, which will be responsible to the joint staff's board, with Admiral Towers in over-all command.

Under the new joint command, Admiral Towers assumes the title of Commander in Chief Pacific (CinCPac) and U. S. Pacific Fleet (CinCPacFleet). The term "Pacific Ocean Areas" will no longer be used by the Navy.

Staff titles for top Army commanders will be "Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, Pacific," for General Hull; "Commanding General, AAFAC," for General Stace; and "Deputy CinCPac" for Admiral McCormick.

To implement Admiral Towers' joint staff set-up for the entire Pacific area, General Hull created a Hawaiian Area Command for the defense of Hawaii and for the training of Army, Navy, and Air units assigned to it. The Hawaiian Area Command will consist of ground forces under Maj. Gen. George H. Decker, Army Air Forces under General Stace, and the search and development, construction, operation and maintenance, and citizen-reserve activities. The estimates for 1948 contemplate proceeding with construction projects of highest priority at overseas bases and in the continental United States, and limiting procurement to those items essential for the current operation, maintenance, and training of the military forces, except for aircraft and limited quantities of newly developed items.

"Effective defense under modern conditions requires us to push ahead in scientific and technological fields. Toward this end, expenditures for research and development by the Army and Navy are projected at 530 million dollars in the fiscal year 1948—slightly above their 1947 rate. Similarly, we must keep alive the knowledge of military skills among our citizens. To provide for an orderly expansion of citizen-reserve organizations, expenditures of 308 million dollars are projected in 1948—about two-thirds more than the outlays in the current fiscal year when these programs are getting under way. The reserve organizations of the Army will still be below planned strength at the end of 1948."

Following are the official budget tables showing the amounts asked for 1948 and how they differ from the actual appropriations for the current year:

Shift High Commands

Effecting a general reshuffling of our high command in Europe as new assignments were announced this week for General Joseph T. McNarney, General Mark W. Clark, Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay and Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes.

General McNarney, Commanding General of United States Forces in Europe and Commander-in-Chief of United States Forces of Occupation in Germany, will become AAF Representative of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations. General McNarney will be the senior representative of the United States Army on duty with the Committee.

General George C. Kenney, who was the first AAF Representative, was succeeded by Lt. Gen. Harold L. George, whose retirement was announced recently. General McNarney's new assignment will take effect about 15 March.

A member of the Special Observers Group which was in London, England, from May to December, 1941, General McNarney was at that time appointed a member of the Roberts Commission to investigate the attack on Pearl Harbor. He subsequently served as Chairman of the Reorganization Committee of the War Department and in March, 1942, was designated Deputy Chief of Staff of the United States Army. He served in this capacity until he went overseas in October, 1944, as Deputy Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations and Commanding General of the United States Forces in that area. He became Acting Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean in September, 1945, and succeeded General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower in Germany in December, 1945.

Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, Deputy Military Governor and United States Representative on the Coordinating Committee for Germany since April, 1945, will succeed General McNarney. Prior to going overseas General Clay was Director of Materiel, Army Service Forces, in which capacity he supervised procurement. Later he served as Deputy to War Mobilizer, James F. Byrnes.

General Mark W. Clark, Commander-in-Chief, United States Forces of Occupation in Austria, has been selected to command the Sixth Army with headquarters at San Francisco, California.

General Clark was Deputy Commander-in-Chief of the forces landing in North Africa in 1942, and, in January of 1943, assumed command of the Fifth Army which he led during the campaigns in Italy. He became Commanding General of the Fifteenth Army Group in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations in December, 1944, holding this position until he was named Commander-in-Chief of the United States Forces of Occupation in Austria in June, 1945.

Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes will relinquish his present assignment as Commanding General of the Third Army in Germany and become Deputy to General Clark in Austria about 10 Jan. He will succeed General Clark upon the latter's departure for the United States at a date not yet determined, probably after the completion of the forthcoming discussions of the Austrian Treaty where General Clark will act as deputy to Mr. Byrnes.

After extensive combat service in North Africa, Sicily and Italy, General Keyes, in September, 1945, was appointed Commanding General of the Seventh Army while that organization was serving as part of the United States Forces of Occupation in the European Theater.

Officer Assignment Policies

Army personnel who have completed 24 months' overseas duty since 7 Dec. 1941, when eligible for reassignment in the United States, will be selected for assignment to duties at Army headquarters, the civilian components, or recruiting service, whenever possible.

A new War Department policy, designed to stabilize these activities, prescribes the order in which personnel with overseas service will be assigned to such duties. With the exception of General officers, the policy will be followed in making assignments to Army headquarters (chiefs of general and special staff sections), ROTC, National Guard or ORC instructors, or the Army Recruiting Service.

The maximum tour of duty at such an activity was set at two years, unless an officer becomes eligible for overseas assignment prior to completion of such a period.

Replacement of officer personnel now assigned to these activities will be effected as follows:

- "Personnel with less than 12 months overseas will go overseas when eligible.
- "Personnel with 12 to 18 months overseas who have been assigned for less than 6 months will go overseas when eligible.
- "Personnel with 12 to 18 months overseas who have been assigned for more than 6 months will complete a 1 year assignment then go overseas when eligible.
- "Personnel with 18 to 24 months overseas who have been assigned for less than 1 year will complete 1 year assignment, then go overseas when eligible.
- "Personnel with 18 to 24 months overseas who have been assigned for more than 1 year will complete a 2 year assignment, then go overseas when eligible.
- "Personnel with over 24 months overseas

UNITED STATES ARMY

will complete 2 year assignment, then go overseas when eligible."

The provisions of this new policy are not applicable to officers already alerted or under final movement orders for overseas movement.

What's your stake in the Army?

Whether you realize it or not, you have a substantial investment in the Army. Every month and every year you have spent in uniform adds to the cash value of your equity.

For example, take a soldier who entered the Army in 1941, at 18 years of age. He's a Staff Sergeant now, at 23, with every prospect of working up to Master Sergeant. If he left the service his training and ability might get him a civilian job that would give him a net income about equal to his present one. But he would be giving up an equity worth $6000 in cash!

Here's why. If this soldier remains in the Army he can expect to retire on half pay in 15 more years, at age 38—still a young man. His retirement pay as a Master Sergeant will then be $107.25 per month, as long as he lives. Or if he stays in till he's 48, he'll get retirement pay of $185.63 every month for life! Any civilian retirement plan providing such a monthly income would cost him over $100 a month all through his working life.

To find out how much of an investment you have in your Army career, just multiply the number of months you've been in by $100. If you go back to civilian life without completing 20 years of service, you're tossing that money out the window. And, you're giving yourself all the best of it when you decide to reenlist. Talk it over with the Recruiting Officer at any Army Post, Camp or Station.

Fleet Training Exercises

The Navy is making plans for training exercises in the Caribbean, beginning next month, for units of the Atlantic Fleet.

The period 2 Feb. to 19 March has been designated for training exercises for major fleet units, and the amphibious forces will carry out special exercises from 18 Feb. to 24 March.

The exercises were announced this week with a call for 2500 Naval Reserve officers and enlisted men to volunteer for active duty with these six-weeks training exercises.

Although other details of the coming exercises were withheld, it is speculated that they will follow the pattern set last Spring when Admiral Marc A. Mitscher led 29 ships of the newly-established Eighth Fleet through the Navy's first post-war peacetime maneuvers. President Truman embarked on the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt to witness a portion of the exercise.

The units under Admiral Mitscher conducted daily air exercises, including attack, reconnaissance and air defense operations, which tested the FDR and Midway, then newly-commissioned, and restored battle veteran warships to wartime conditions.

The forthcoming exercise is expected to be built around a group of large carriers, including CVB's and CV's.

The Eighth Fleet, while operating in the Caribbean, stopped at Trinidad, and carried out air exercises over Guantánamo and Culebra.

Navy Honors General Patton

The Navy Distinguished Service Medal posthumously awarded General George S. Patton, Jr., USA, was presented his widow by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal 8 Jan. in the Navy Department.

Present at the ceremony were Mrs. Patton's son-in-law and daughter, Col. and Mrs. John K. Waters of 3900 Tunlaw Road, Northwest, Washington, D. C.; their sons, John K. Waters, Jr., 9 and George Patton Waters, 6; Lt. George S. Patton, III, of Ft. Benning, Ga.; Lt. Col. J. W. Totten, Jr., of Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., son-in-law of the General, and his parents, Col. and Mrs. J. W. Totten, sr., of 1661 Crescent Place, Northwest, Washington, D. C., and Comdr. Keith Merrill, USNR, and Mrs. Merrill of Herndon, Va., brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Patton. Mrs. Patton's home is in South Hamilton, Mass.

Nominate Transferees to USN

Nominations to be sent to the Senate for confirmation, following recess appointments made since adjournment of the 79th Congress, will include approximately 2,050 Naval Reserve and Temporary USN officers being transferred to the Regular Navy.

The 2,050 names will include those listed in BuPers C/L 184-46, printed in the Navy Department Semi-Monthly Bulletin of 15 Aug., BuPers C/ 196-46, in the SMB of 31 Aug., and BuPers C/L 203-46, in the SMB of 15 Sept. These names will be sent to the Senate Committee on Armed Services by next week.

Confirmation of the 2,050 recess appointments will raise to almost 9,000 the number of USNR and USN(T) officers who have been confirmed by the Senate for transfer.

Three circular letters from which initial nominations will be made listed line, staff corps, and chief warrant officers approximately as follows:

| | Line | Staff | CWO |
|--------|------|-------|-----|
| 184-46 | 565 | 159 | 324 |
| 196-46 | 105 | 64 | — |
| 203-46 | 719 | 136 | 155 |

During the 79th Congress, the Senate confirmed approximately 6,880 officers for transfer. These were distributed among the line and staff corps approximately as follows:

| | Line |
|------------------------|------|
| Medical Corps | 243 |
| Supply Corps | 500 |
| Chaplain Corps | 71 |
| Civil Engineer Corps | 170 |
| Dental Corps | 121 |

Select Officer Specialists

Selection boards will convene in the Bureau of Naval Personnel in the near future for the selection of officers to be designated as EDO, AEDO, and CEC.

The boards will consider all Regular officers, including accepted transferees, who requested change in classification to any one of these classifications.

Dates now set for selection are 21 Jan. for considering transfers to EDO, 27 Jan. for transfer to CEC, and an unscheduled date in Feb. for considering transfer to AEDO.

Illegal Sales Practices

Naval personnel are being solicited to act as agents on board ship for distributing advertising matter, taking orders for goods, and engaging in trade.

Navy Regulations, Article 85(2), prohibits this practice, as follows:

"No person in the naval service shall, without proper authority, either for himself or as an agent, engage in trade or introduce any article for purposes of trade on board any vessel of the Navy or at any navy yard, naval station, or marine barracks."

Visas to Philippines

Naval dependents and American wives of Filipinos who are American citizens and who are proceeding to the Philippine Islands aboard a Naval transport will be required to obtain visas from a Philippine consular officer prior to departure, according to Alnavsta 2.

Aid Vet Rehabilitation

As a resolution for the new year, Vice Adm. Aubrey W. Fitch, USN, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, has urged every citizen to take his part in a peacetime campaign to aid veterans returning to civilian life.

In a radio address from Baltimore 1 Jan., Admiral Fitch voiced his admiration of the United Citizens League, which he said, "is at work striving to awaken the citizens to their responsibilities for the men and women of our services."

He decried the "spirit of indifference" which has crept in and "overshadowed better instincts." Men and women in uniform are no longer the "object of pride and admiration" as they were during the war, he said. "This cannot continue."

"With some forty-five years of Navy life behind me, I have seen the paramount importance of cooperation and understanding between the civilian citizen and the members of the armed forces," he declared. "This is particularly necessary today and it should be a natural thing for during the recent war all the military services were predominantly citizen forces."

Train Rifle Instructors

A Marine Detachment has been activated at the Naval Training Center, San Diego, with a mission of furnishing rifle range instructors. Capt. Theodore R. Cathey, USMC, is commanding officer, and CWO Everett C. Henson, is detachment officer.

Reactivate General Board

Under the leadership of Admiral John H. Towers and with perhaps an entirely new membership, the General Board will be reactivated within the next few months and restored to its pre-war eminence as an advisory group to the Secretary of the Navy.

The decision to reactivate the Board was made recently by Secretary Forrestal following a lengthy study of the views of several veteran flag officers who were polled on this subject. During the war, the Board functioned with little work directed to it, and since V-J Day has had almost nothing to do.

Admiral Towers, in taking this assignment, is said to have asked permission to select other flag officers who will sit with him on the Board. The rejuvenation process itself will be delayed until Admiral Towers is relieved of his present duties and lines up a full and active membership.

Admiral Towers will be relieved about 1 Feb. by Vice Adm. Louis Denfeld as Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet and head of the unified Pacific Command recently established by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Although he will reach retirement age on 30 Jan., he will remain on active duty whether on the active list or the retired list.

Admiral Towers, as an aviator, helped champion the development of Naval aviation, and will be the first Naval Aviator ever to head the General Board. In this capacity, he will have great influence in further integrating surface and aviation units of the Navy. He served for a time during the war as Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Until the Board convenes under its new chairman, it is unlikely that the scope or nature of its study will be definitely established. Before the transfer of administrative functions to the office of the CNO began with the start of the war, the General Board was kept informed of all improved war plans and had a definite part in fashioning other important decisions.

Senior member of the Board now is Vice Adm. Frank Jack Fletcher, who is currently slated to go on terminal leave 1 March, and on the retired list 1 May. Vice Adm. John H. Hoover has been ordered detached from the Board and assigned duty as President of the Naval Examining Board and the Naval Retraining Board. Vice Adm. P. N. L. Bellinger has been a member about a year.

Other members are Vice Adm. Charles H. Morris, who joined the Board last September, and Rear Adm. Robert W. Hayler, who has been occupied primarily as senior member of the Board of Decorations and Medals in the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

This five-man membership fulfills requirements of law as set forth in Navy Regulations calling for "not less than five line officers of the rank of captain or flag rank, of which a majority are of flag rank." The Board is primarily an advisory body, and neither the Board nor any of its members have any executive or administrative duties.

The Board, according to Navy Regs, is charged with preparing, for the Secretary's approval, a statement of the United States Naval Policy, and the general terms of its application governing the organization, development, maintenance, training, and operation of the Navy.

In addition, its duties included study and recommendations to the Secretary on the military characteristics which are desirable for new ships.

With the start of World War II, however, much of its work was performed by groups within the office of the Chief of Naval Operations. The establishment of the Deputy Chiefs in 1942, further reduced the chance of the Board's restoration to its pre-war position of influence and prominence. Since V-J Day, the Board has done almost no work, and, likewise, has not been informed of plans being made within the Navy Department.

measured by sensitive gauges which are constantly checked and regulated by the hospital physicist. The mobility and easy manipulation of the machine, which when not in use is pulled up into a dome of the ceiling, makes it possible to focus its rays at the exact angle desired while the patient lies comfortably on a table. Ordinary electric lights in the nose of the machine help determine the area of direct focus over the tumor before the million volt roentgen ray is used.

When electrons are stopped by atomic units in the cells, energy is set free. This freed energy disrupts various biological activities including the atomic activity and results in destruction of cells and tissue. Super-voltage (1000 KV) has certain physical advantages over the high voltage (200 KV), the first due to the greater speed with which the secondary electrons travel when the superhigh voltage roentgen ray passes through tissue.

Secondary radiation resulting from super voltage travels with so great a speed that less is absorbed in the superficial skin layers. Consequently there is less skin damage and a larger amount of primary radiation can be delivered through each skin portal.

Slow moving electrons resulting from lower voltage are more readily absorbed by that tissue adjacent to the point of contact. Thus, when the cancer is treated with the high rather than the super voltage rays, the normal tissue surrounding it may become damaged by the secondary radiation and presents an added complication.

The second advantage of the supervoltage is that a greater percentage of the primary beam reaches the depth of the tumor because the secondary radiations are driven with such tremendous force that they are added to and become a part of the bundle of the primary beam energy. A narrower beam of supervoltage ray gives, therefore, more radiation to the tumor without a haphazard scattering of secondary radiation to adjacent tissue.

The clinical value of the supervoltage roentgen therapy as used in the Walter Reed Hospital was proved in the fact that not only was it more effective in treatment of cases too advanced to be improved by 200 KV radiation, but also more effective in treatment of tumors ordinarily treated with 200 KV radiation.

When other radiation is of no avail, supervoltage will usually bring improvement in the condition. One dramatic example of this latter fact is the case of a soldier with malignant brain tumor so advanced that he lacked all coordination and lapsed into coma. Under treatment of the million volt roentgen ray, complete restoration of function occurred.

The clinical picture at Walter Reed and other Army hospitals tackling cancer treatment has the unusual feature of the age range of its patients. Cancer is uncommon in the age group twenty to thirty-four years. Because of the relatively young average age of the military patients sifted from several million men and women of the Army services, the distribution of tumor types is unbalanced compared to that in civilian cancer clinics.

At present a large number of specimens of cancer are under study at the Army Institute of Pathology and other research is being carried on throughout the Army to further safeguard the health of personnel.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Establishment and protection of peace through maintenance in accordance with our National needs and international commitments, of Regular Establishments organized, equipped and trained to utilize and employ modern materials of war, and coordinated with industry and Labor kept intimately familiar with the manufacture and supply of such materials.
2. Scientific research to keep our lead in the atom bomb, guided missiles, and biological and radio-active agents, and development of methods for their use and for defense against them, plus effective safeguards in secrecy.
3. The building up of the National Guard and Reserve components of the Armed Forces to their Congress and State authorized post-war strengths. Federally equipped, housed, and trained, effectively coordinated with the Regular Services, and with Universal Military Training to maintain their strengths.
4. Protection of active and retired pay to meet rising costs so as to enable maintenance of American standards of living; relief from pay reduction through income taxes; increase in per diem travel allowances; compensation for Service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.
5. Enactment, after ample opportunity for study and comment by Service personnel in the field and with the Fleet, of legislation for orderly promotion systems in the Regular Establishments with recognition of war service and war ranks to prevent stagnation, and to insure the maintenance of high professional standards.
6. Continuance and expansion of Service Schools, including the National War College, Army-Navy Staff College, and the Industrial College.
7. Rank and retirement benefits for former Army enlisted personnel and Warrant Officers who served in war on same basis now accorded those of the other Armed Forces.
8. Upward revision of pension scales to insure Service widows and dependents a living income.

IT is gratifying that stark realism rather than starry illusion is motivating the President and Congress in their formulation of our current policy on national defense. Bluntly, the former in his State of the Union message, declared that when there is established a system of collective security, then the United States would be willing to take the lead in collective disarmament; and he advised the Congress that until such a system becomes in effect, we must not again allow our weakness to invite attack. The loud applause given by the Republican majority in response to this emphatic assertion, was substantial proof of the unanimity of the Government on the question of our continued strength. Totally different is the attitude today than it was after World War I when the United States, become pacifist, demobilized its armies, entered into a bi-lateral treaty with England under which we started to scrap our Navy, and as the years rolled by, depleted our air arm. Because we believe the American people have learned thoroughly the grim lesson, it is not necessary to repeat that had we maintained ourselves in strength, fear of us in all probability, would have restrained Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito from aggressive acts, and World War II would not have occurred. Especially from Russia is emanating propaganda for collective disarmament. The President has answered that one as above, and reinforcing his conclusions, is Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, that patriot and astute statesman, who got a 10-0 approval (Russia and Poland abstained from voting) on the American plan for atomic energy control from the United Nations Atomic Commission. This is what Mr. Baruch said:

"If the Russian proposals for disarmament are based upon a study that will result in a commission which will say how many troops, how many constabulary, and how many various agents each country can have, with limitations of various kinds of arms to each nation, with a system of international control and international inspection, without interference and with full access into each country to see that there are no violators—and if any are found, swift and sure punishment is set up for violators of any of the terms, with no escape of a violator, by veto or otherwise—they will have led the world into a warless age."

This practical exposure of the difficulties in the way of disarmament can only mean that nations will remain armed, and this fact makes it essential that until all people are ready for selfless peace, the United States must always be prepared. That preparation includes our continued manufacture and development of the atomic bomb; and congressional appreciation of our situation in this fear-ridden world, requires wise action in consonance with it.

IN the permanent Regular promotion systems which the War and Navy Departments soon will send to Congress, selection and forced elimination will be provided. While these will be advocated as desirable features to stimulate men to their best efforts, to get superior officers to the top and to rid the service of misfits, they must be approached with the utmost caution and girded 'round with safeguards to protect the interest both of the government and the individual officer. The Navy, which now plans to tone down the more drastic features of its pre-war promotion system, is replete with examples of the forcing out of able officers, many of whom, fortunately, were brought back into the Service and performed outstandingly during World War II. A classic example of the fallibility of the selection system is the case of Admiral John H. Towers, USN, now commander of Army and Navy Forces in the Pacific Area and Commander of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, and soon to be brought to Washington to head the Navy General Board and to restore it to its original position of prestige and power. In 1938, when Admiral Towers was a captain, a board of flag officers selecting captains for promotion to rear admiral passed over his name and left him in the grade of captain while officers junior to him were to be promoted over his head. The fact that Admiral Towers had been an outstanding and outspoken advocate of naval aviation in a period when many of the high command were still battleship champions, was generally credited with having had more influence in his "pass over" than any consideration of his professional merit—but that is one of the evils of the system, the fact that personalities and prejudices can have weight. Fortunately for the Navy and the Nation, President Roosevelt shortly thereafter appointed the then Captain Towers as Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics with the temporary rank of rear admiral. Subsequently it became virtually impossible for the selection boards to ignore him further. But the possibility still exists that if circumstances had not intervened the country might have lost the services of one of its great naval men. There are many other instances, as all Navy men know. Therefore we urge the Committees on Armed Services to examine closely the proposed drafts of the new promotion bills to the end that there be adequate safeguards to prevent the loss of valuable officers through unfair selection or inefficient elimination systems.

Midway Air Claims Differ

An Army Air Forces report now being written claims many direct hits by AAF B-17s at the Battle of Midway, despite the Navy's recent statement in "The campaigns of the Pacific War" that "no hits were scored by this means."

The volume mentioned, the navy's report to the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, was reviewed in the 28 Dec. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

In describing the action of 4, 5 and 6 June, 1942, the book contends:

"During the battle, carrier-based dive bombers made 101 sorties obtaining 32 hits, 15 of which were the principal factors in the destruction of the First Air-Fleet Carrier Force while the remainder sank the Mikuma and damaged the Mogami and Arashio. Although the B-17s of the Seventh Air Force based at Midway made 62 sorties for horizontal bombing attacks, testimony of Japanese survivors indicates that no hits were scored by this means."

At AAF Headquarters, spokesmen said that a report of the battle is now being prepared for submission to the Joint Army and Navy Assessment Committee. It was emphasized that the report was not being prepared in answer to the Navy's claims. This report, it was said, will contain the following claims:

The B-17s flew 55 sorties at altitudes of from 3,500 to 25,000 feet, during which 314 five hundred and six hundred pound bombs were dropped.

The B-17s scored 22 direct hits, six probable hits and 46 near misses.

In addition, four B-28s dropped one aerial torpedo apiece and made three hits on two carriers.

The Navy report also stated:

"The difficulties which attend high altitude bombing of ships were well illustrated when, on the afternoon of the 6th, a flight of B-17s reported sinking a 'cruiser' by an attack delivered from over 10,000 feet; in fact, the 'cruiser' was a United States submarine which hastily submerged when the first bombs fell off her bow."

Col. Irvine to SAC

Col. Clarence S. Irvine, pilot of the B-29, "Pacusan Dreamboat," which flew non-stop from Hawaii to Egypt across the magnetic North Pole region last October, will be stationed in the Washington area after 15 Jan.

Strategic Air Command headquarters announced that he would be assigned for duty in the maintenance program.

Air Needs Outlined

Maj. Gen. Lawrence C. Craigie, of the Air Materiel Command, speaking before the Society of Automotive Engineers 7 Jan. at Detroit, emphasized that preparedness for global warfare is imperative.

We must have transport aircraft, General Craigie said, of such size and in sufficient quantities to move entire divisions of ground troops fully equipped for thousands of miles in a minimum of time.

"We have pilotless aircraft contemplated," he said, "which will have a rate of climb in excess of 100,000 feet per minute."

In outlining other needs General Craigie said that present meteorological data above 60,000 feet is meager, and that it must be extended to at least 600,000 feet.

Speaking of the place of industry in keeping the peace, General Craigie said: "Our victory in the past war unquestionably was due primarily to this nation's industrial might. We sincerely hope there will be no future emergencies, but development of superior weapons and industry geared to produce them immediately are our best insurance for a lasting peace."

Security Campaign in Japan

Hq. Fifth Air Force, Nagoya—Expressing concern over loose talk and lax security habits into which military personnel have fallen during more than a year of occupation in Japan, Maj. Gen. K. B. Wolfe, Commanding General of Fifth Air Force, has announced an extensive security campaign calculated to stamp out thoughtless conversation on military subjects, careless handling of vital documents, and all other leakages of classified information to unauthorized persons.

General Wolfe has appointed Col. W. T. Smith, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, Fifth Air Force, to assume personal supervision of the drive which will explain to officers and GIs alike the necessity of maintaining absolute silence on new equipment, recent devices and unpublished processes.

AAF Commanders Shifted

Maj. Gen. St. Clair Streett, wartime commander of the 13th Air Force, has been named chief of the Military Procurement Service, The Adjutant General's Office.

The new assignment, effective 1 Jan., places General Streett in charge of the drive for Army volunteers which has been directed by Brig. Gen. Burdette M. Fitch. The latter now becomes deputy to General Streett.

General Streett's most recent prior assignment was as Deputy Commander, Strategic Air Command.

Maj. Gen. Clements McMullen, former commander of the Eighth Air Force is now deputy commander of the Strategic Air Command, and Brig. Gen. Roger M. Ramey was moved up from Deputy to Commanding General of the Eighth Air Force.

Pilot Training Reopened to EM

Reopening of the Aviation Cadet pilot training program was announced 6 Jan. by the Army Air Forces, with the first quotas to be filled by qualified Regular Army enlisted men of the AAF. The 1947 program calls for more extensive training than was given during the war, with the instruction course increased to 52 weeks.

Eligibility requirements include: Regular Army, currently on duty with the AAF in the continental United States, unmarried citizen, between the ages of 18 and 28½ years, high school graduate, able to pass mental and aptitude examinations, good health, recommended by commanding officer, at least two years' service remaining under current enlistment or indicated intention of extending enlistment.

Priorities for selection of applicants for training will be given on a basis of the number of years' schooling completed by the individual and scores made on the qualifying tests.

Enlisted men appointed as cadets and later eliminated from pilot training will revert to the grade held immediately prior to their appointment and their names will be forwarded to their former major commands for reassignment.

In the event that quotas are not filled by AAF enlisted men, former aviation cadets who had entered training during 1944 and 1945 and whose training was terminated by the end of the war may be eligible to re-enter training this year. Former cadets who wish to re-enter training may write the Commanding General, Headquarters Army Air Forces, Attention: AFPMP-3, Washington 25, D. C., giving their age, educational attainment, home address and marital status. This information will be kept on file for use when additional men are required to fill quotas.

Present plans call for training approximately 1,500 men in three equal classes, but the exact numbers to be trained hinge upon Congressional determination of the size of the armed forces. Under the new training schedule classes will normally begin on the first day of March, July and October of each year.

General Carl Spaatz, commanding general of the AAF, said that while the field is now limited to enlisted men of the AAF the next step will be to expand the list of eligibles to include all Regular Army enlisted men.

AAF Sets 30 Records in Year

The Army Air Forces broke 23 international and two national aviation records and established four new international records during 1946, according to a summary of the year's results compiled by the AAF.

One record, that of helicopter flight duration, was broken twice in 1946 by AAF crews and equipment.

All the records now held by the AAF were established in standard types of aircraft, and, with the exception of the new jet-propelled fighters, all the other aircraft types were used in combat.

In addition, a number of unofficial records were established by the AAF during the year, including the speed run by the P-84, which flew at 610 miles an hour at Muroc Army Air Base, Calif., and the polar flight of the "Pacusan Dreamboat."

New Radar Units Installed

Long-range radar units, designed for the exact plotting of aircraft and valued close to $1,000,000, are being installed at Washington National Airport and Andrews Field, Md., by the Army Air Forces for use by the All-Weather Flying Service and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The radar units are being installed by the Air Materiel Command and are approximately half completed. When installed, the equipment at National Airport will be operated by Air Defense Command personnel and the units at Andrews Field by Airways and Air Communications Service controllers.

Remote Control Flight

A drone B-17, remotely controlled by a "mother" B-17 will fly a demonstration bombing mission to Washington, D. C., from Eglin Field, Fla., headquarters of the Air Proving Ground Command, 13 Jan.

The drone will take off from Eglin Field and fly to Richmond, Va., from which point it will proceed out to sea where a dummy bomb will be released by remote control on a practice water target. After the bomb run the drone will fly to Washington and circle the city before returning to Eglin Field.

Control crew members include Capt. Gordon W. Barrett, Capt. L. R. Audette, Capt. Neil H. Lathrop, Capt. Harry W. Barrett, Capt. Walter Schlie, and S. Sgt. Henry F. McEntire, all veterans of Operation Crossroads.

AAF Institute of Technology

Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.—Brig. Gen. Edgar R. Sorenson will be the new commandant of the Army Air Forces Institute of Technology according to an announcement made by Lt. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Commanding General, Air Materiel Command.

PX for Reserves

Following an announcement by Marine Corps Headquarters that members of its active reserve will be afforded the privilege of purchasing at post exchanges, National Headquarters of the Reserve Officers Association has requested the War Department to extend similar privileges to disabled members of the civilian components.

Meanwhile, in a letter directed to Maj. Gen. Edward Bres, Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs, General Evans stated, "It would seem that if such a ruling could be made by one of the Armed Forces, it might well be done by the Army. The granting of such privileges is, in itself, a small thing but if it were granted by the War Department for members of the National Guard and Organized Reserve Corps, it would most certainly assist materially in the raising of the morale among these components."

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—General of the Armies of the United States Pershing and Secretary of War Patterson expressed the collective view of the Army in lauding the appointment of General of the Army George C. Marshall as Secretary of State. Secretary Forrestal and Fleet Admiral King and Nimitz in similar manner uttered the view of the Navy. Thus by his action, President Truman has brought about a condition of a single front in foreign affairs—the combination of diplomacy and armed power—which always has been the goal of our statesmen, but only haphazardly achieved even in the war just ended. Having always realized that knowledge of foreign relations is an essential requirements of command, General Marshall included that subject in his studies, and that knowledge, supplemented by the experience gained in World War II as well as World War I, increased his capacity to fill eminently the office of Chief of Staff. In the Secretaryship of State, not only will his experience be valuable, but as a participant in all the conferences held by President Roosevelt and President Truman with Messrs. Stalin, Churchill and Attlee, he will have first hand knowledge of the meaning of the agreements they reached, and thus will be able to interpret them authoritatively. Because of his familiarity with the work of the Latin-American Defense Board during the war, as well as his acquaintance with and visits to South America—Brazil gave him an enthusiastic reception—he is equipped to deal with our southern neighbors in a manner which should be satisfactory to them and satisfactory to us, and, in considering our relations with Argentina, he will bring a viewpoint, distant from the squabbles which brought antagonism, but contemplating from a military as well as political angle, understanding of the imperative need of integrated interests and cooperation. His up-to-date awareness of the civil war in China, and the conflicts between the Chiang Kai-Shek factions and the Communists he clearly showed in the statement he issued when returning home; and his denunciation, particularly of the Chinese Communists, revealed to Russia what he thinks of that brand of ideology. Moscow thus knows that when he arrives in March to discuss the fate of Germany and Austria, it will be with thorough understanding of communistic aims and purposes, and, as his course in China evidenced, he will be inspired by a determination to reach solutions which will make for international peace based upon tolerance. Back of his attitude the Powers will realize is his understanding of the value of force, and in this connection he will reiterate his views on the necessity of our preparedness, and included therein will be an insistent plea for universal military training. This quotation from his last war report is here apropos:

"In order to establish an international system for preventing wars, peace-loving peoples of the world are demonstrating an eagerness to send their representatives to such conferences as those at Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco with the fervent hope that they may find a practical solution. Yet, until it is proved that such a solution has been found to prevent wars, a rich nation which lays down its arms, as we have done after every war in our history, will court disaster."

The appointment of General Marshall, which was confirmed immediately by the Senate, arouses special interest as to the method he will adapt to bring about closer integration of the State Department and the Armed Services, i. e., between the policy making and the policy enforcement agencies. Already Maj. Gen. John H. Hildring, an able officer of the Regular Army, has been functioning for some time as Assistant Secretary of State. General Hildring also represents the State Department on the State-War-Navy Coordinating Committee, an organization created after the war as the agency "to reconcile and coordinate the action to be taken by the State, War and Navy Departments on matters of common interest and, under the guidance of the Secretaries of State, War and Navy, establish policies on politico-military questions referred to it." Every week this committee, comprising General Hildring, Assistant Secretary of War Petersen and Under Secretary of the Navy Sullivan, meets to discuss developments and plan the future. It has a Secretariat composed of Col. William A. Schulgen, Lt. Col. Virgil F. Field, Maj. Howard W. Karbel, and Capt. E. L. Turner, representing the War Department; Capt. Vernon L. Lorance and Comdr. J. B. Cresap, representing the Navy, and Mr. Harold W. Moseley and Mr. Jack Gardiner, representing the State Department. It is recalled, too, that as a further extension of this policy President Truman proposed, in his unification message, that there be established a Council of National Defense, composed of the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the proposed Department of Common Defense, which would integrate foreign and military policies. As Ambassador to Moscow we have Lt. Gen. Walter B. Smith, a Regular Army officer whose military astuteness is recognized by the Russians. In South Africa we have as Minister General Thomas Holcomb, former commandant of the Marine Corps. Admiral A. G. Kirk, USN, represents our interests as Ambassador to Belgium. Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy is the United States Representative on the Far Eastern Commission. Also actively shaping our policies abroad are the military leaders in the occupied countries—General of the Army Douglas MacArthur in Japan; General Joseph T. McNarney, soon to be succeeded by Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, in Germany; General Mark W. Clark in Austria, who will relinquish his post soon to Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes while the former serves as the Secretary of State's Deputy for preliminary work on the Austrian treaty draft; and Lt. Gen. John Hodge in Korea. Within the United Nations Organization itself our military men and our military viewpoint play a major role. There we have on the Military Staff Committee Lt. Gen. Harold L. George, Admiral R. K. Turner, and Lt. Gen. M. B. Ridgway. Later General McNarney will replace General George. Thus, the integration of our experts in National Security with our foreign policy agencies continues. Under General Marshall its development will be hastened and perfected. To this end we may expect General Marshall to reorganize and reshape the State Department to better carry out these policies, and in the reorganization and reshaping we may be sure that any employee with communistic leanings will be promptly dismissed.

The immediate Far East concern of the State Department affects Russia as well as China, and was the subject of a formal communication to both nations this past week. It reopens the Dairen matter, and while the note avoids any reference to the 20 Dec. episode, when an American landing craft was ordered out by the Russian port official, there is small doubt that his episode really occasioned an inquiry for which there already was ample justification. Under the Sino-Soviet treaty of 14 Aug. 1945, Dairen was termed a "free port open to trade and shipping of all countries." Russia was granted free wharves and warehouses but no governmental authority save that to be asserted as part of the war operation, and even that was to terminate three months after Japan's surrender. There has been no such termination sixteen months after the surrender, and Washington now formally asks both nations to carry out the pledge—the Chinese having already made their own request to that effect. We await also Moscow's reply to our earlier requests for settlement of lend-lease matters, the latest of which was presented by Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith. It asks for a return, as promised, of those lend-lease vessels which are still afloat (reportedly 91 of the original 120) so that they may be employed elsewhere. About half the surviving ships are Liberties; 38 of them are more efficient cargo vessels of 5,000 to 11,000 tons, and 9 are much-desired tankers. There is no present indication of when Moscow will answer either request, but General Marshall can be depended upon to require one.

General Clark and his colleagues already have completed a tentative draft of the Austrian Treaty for presentation, but the bulk of the treaty work must undoubtedly be done by the Big Four in March at the Moscow meeting; the points at issue all require the full authority which only the Big Four possess. A major point is the means of determining what is "former German property" (which is subject to seizure). The Russian disposition is to stamp as such any property which the Germans ever touched, including that which they arbitrarily took away from the Austrians; the western Allies hold that this particular property is, rather, Austrian, and should be returned to the original owners in order to make possible the country's economic rehabilitation. Another issue which will go to the Big Four is that of France's behavior in setting up a customs barrier around the Saar, General Clay protested it vigorously as hampering German rehabilitation, to our own injury, and was prepared to argue the matter in Berlin, but has been told that it will be disposed of by higher authority.

Bernard Baruch's resignation as chief of our delegation to the UN Atomic Energy group followed shortly the fulfillment of his hope—endorsement of his strong anti-veto views by the United Nations Commission. He is succeeded by Warren R. Austin who now (as is common among the nations involved) combines this post with that of principal member of the Security Council. The concentration of responsibility is a desirable thing, partly to avert any division of American official views, partly because it is apparent that in the Security Council itself will be the real power to determine the nation's powers and responsibilities and limitations with regard to control of the atomic bomb and all other armament matters. Mr. Baruch, in resigning and recommending Senator Austin, made a public statement of policy noting in particular that he saw "no reason why this country should not continue making atomic bombs at least until a treaty (for their suppression) is signed by the Senate," i. e., until American security is assured. He dismissed the plea for "scientific freedom," which has been made by a minority of scientists, with the tart observation that "science should be free, but not free to destroy mankind" and then, taking up the Russian view on the continuing veto-right which Mr. Baruch stoutly and successfully opposed in the UN hearings, observed that "Unanimous action is important, but it must not be gained at the expense of principle. To do that would lull the world into a false sense of security . . . No partial plan for the control of atomic energy can be effective or should be accepted by this country . . . We believe this may begin a broad program to govern weapons of mass destruction; it could even include other armaments; were such a system employed it might lead us into a warless age." The essential first step, in his view, he left no doubt, is elimination of the atomic bomb on a universal basis, with absolute powers of inspection and no powers of veto.

Naval Forces Japan—All minesweeping along the northwestern coast of Honshu has been stopped because of hazards of sweeping in winter seas, Commander Naval Activities Japan has announced.

Sweeping will be concentrated in the Inland Sea and Shiminoseki Straits areas where the nearby land provides quieter waters ComNavJap said. There are 154 minesweepers in those localities.

ComNavJap pointed out that minesweeping accidents during November and December decreased slightly. In September there were four bad minesweeping accidents, in November none, and in December, two accidents which caused only minor damage to the ships.

All moored minesweeping was completed last summer, and the Japanese ships are now concentrating on sweeping "influence" mines, which are of the type set off by vessels passing near and not necessarily hitting the mines. Most influence mines are now dead and the process of sweeping influence mine fields consists primarily of ships cruising over the fields to prove the mines are inactive.

Comdr. A. I. Carlson, Minesweeping Officer of ComNavJap, has been assigned additional duty as Commander of Fleet Activities at Sasebo. He relieved Comdr. J. B. Blaine.

War Dept. General Council—The War Department General Council, a little known and seldom mentioned group, is now meeting each week to discuss staff problems. Members of the Council are Directors of the War Department General and Special Staff Divisions. Each Tuesday they meet, usually with General Thomas T. Handy, Deputy Chief of Staff, to discuss current problems, deliver reports and receive instructions and questions.

Prior to World War II this same system was used, the General Council members then consisting of Assistant Chiefs of Staff and Chiefs of Arms and Services. Since that time, however, the assistant chiefs of staff have been reconverted into "Directors," while the Chiefs of Arms have been abolished and the Chiefs of Services relegated to relatively subordinate positions under the General Staff "Directors." Throughout the war the frequency of individual reports by Assistant Chiefs of Staff to the Chief of Staff took the place of the now revived Council.

Actually no formal organization, the Council appoints no secretary or recorder. However, reports are usually submitted under the signature of Brig. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff.

Family Allowances—The Budget Bureau is expected to approve and return to the Navy Department in the near future a bill which, if passed by Congress, would extend the payment of family allowances through 1 July 1949.

The bill, in its present form, is understood to call for continued payments for all enlisted men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps through 1 July 1949, and to contain some provision for extending payments beyond that date under enlistments of specified lengths entered into prior to 1 July 1946.

The terms of these special provisions will be made known only when the bill is formally introduced in Congress, and will even then be subject to change at the discretion of Congress.

This measure has the full support of the services because under present law, family allowance payments will cease at the end of the duration and six months, or at the end of a period of enlistment or reenlistment made before last 1 July. The new bill would establish uniformity in this regard.

The War and Navy Departments some time ago initiated a joint study leading to the writing of the present bill. The Navy, having a greater number of long-term enlistees than the Army, proposed extensions of the FA until 1952. The terminating date, as now established as 1949, represents a three-way agreement between the Army, Navy, and Budget Bureau.

Medical Department—Col. Henry C. Dooling, MC, former Chief Health Officer, The Panama Canal, has been named Chief of the Medical Consultant's Division of The Office of The Surgeon General.

Colonel Dooling succeeds Col. Arden Freer who retired last week after 32 years of service in the Medical Corps to accept a position in the Veteran's Administration on the staff of General Paul V. Hawley, Chief Medical Director.

Col. John C. Fitzpatrick, M. C., has been appointed to the post of Deputy Chief Surgeon, AFPA, replacing Col. A. R. Dreisbach, who recently returned to the States. The new Deputy has been in the Pacific theatre since October, 1945. Previous to his assignment with the Chief Surgeon's office, he was Medical Regulations Officer for the Surgeon General, U. S. Army.

Col. Raymond O. Dart, MC, has succeeded Col. James E. Ash, MC, as Director of the Army Institute of Pathology. Colonel Dart has practiced pathology for more than 25 years, approximately eight years of which were at the Army Medical Museum and Army Institute of Pathology prior to the War. A part of that time he has served as Curator. For the past nine years, Colonel Ash has served as Director of the Army Institute of Pathology. He is now the Scientific Director of the American Registry of Pathology, a major department of the Institute and sponsored by the Division of Medical Sciences of the National Research Council.

Physical Disability Retirements—The report of the House Naval Affairs committee of the 79th Congress, which last week charged that the Navy exercises a too-liberal policy of granting physical disability retirements to Regular officers, should draw attention to the lengthy and rigorous procedure which acts as a safeguard against indiscriminately-awarded disability retirements in both the Navy and Army.

Naval officers who feel that they may have a disability may apply for examination, or disability may be found in any officer either at the time of his annual physical or should he require hospitalization. A medical survey board, usually consisting of at least three officers, studies each case individually and submits recommendations to a Naval Retiring Board.

Naval Retiring Boards are established at all large Naval medical centers. They consist of from five to nine officers, of which two-fifths must be medical officers. The senior member is normally a Captain. The Retiring Board is required by law to begin its proceedings with a review of each physical examination, and to further review each case on its individual merits.

The law also provides for Naval Retiring Review Boards, whose duty it is "to review, at the request of any officer retired or released from active service, without pay, for physical disability pursuant to the decision of a Retiring Board . . . the findings and decisions of such board."

The only officers without the right to appeal their own cases are those who have severed their connections with the Service by resigning. All officers, including Naval Reservists, may apply for review of their cases.

Chaplains Conference—On the afternoon of 9 Jan. a conference of the Army, Navy, and Veterans Administration Chaplains of the Second Area was held at the Army War College, Washington, D. C. After a luncheon at which all members of the Army and Navy Chaplains Association were guests of the Washington Chapter, educational and morale motion pictures of interest to chaplains were presented by Chaplain Monroe Drew, USNR.

Following this, a period was devoted to a Panel on "Juvenile Delinquency" after Mr. Lewis B. Nichols, of the FBI, had delivered an address on the subject. Chaplain E. W. Webber, Assistant Director of the Chaplains Service of the Veterans Administration, then spoke on ways and means in which service and civilian Chaplains may assist VA Chaplains.

The session ended with a general discussion on the relation of local chapters to area and national organizations of the Chaplains Association.

Marine Corps—Marine Corps flight personnel may now receive the Air Medal and Distinguished Flying Cross on the basis of the strike-flight system, retroactive to 7 Dec. 1941.

Previously, these awards on the strike-flight system were made in the Marine Corps only for the period after 18 Dec. 1944. The strike-flight system provides for the automatic award of medals for a specified number of combat missions. The Commander, Air Force, Pacific Fleet, is the only delegated authority to award the Air Medal and Distinguished Flying Cross under this system.

Recommendations for awards to personnel released from active duty and for posthumous awards may be made by former commanding officers. In such cases, the recommendation will be submitted to the Navy Department, attention Board of Review for Decorations and Medals, via the Commanding General, Aircraft, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, and Commander, Air Force, Pacific Fleet.

Army Ground Forces—General Jacob L. Devers, Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, accompanied by Maj. Gen. Herbert T. L. Earnest, G-3, AGF, and Lt. Col. Henry G. Larnard, Aide to the Commanding General, left Ft. Monroe, Va., 6 Jan., for a two-week speaking and inspection tour. Following an address before the National War College, Washington, D. C., the AGF Commander and his party will visit Ft. Benning, Ga., Maxwell Field, Ala., Camp Carson, Colorado, Ft. Riley, Kans., Camp McCoy, Wis. and Chicago, Ill., returning to Ft. Monroe 18 Jan.

Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold, Chief Plans Section, AGF, appeared before the first class of the U. S. Military Academy, 6-7 Jan. General Arnold spoke on the "Organization and Mission of the Army Ground Forces."

Maj. Gen. Willard G. Wyman, G-2, AGF, will join Maj. Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlain, War Department Director of Intelligence, in a conference on intelligence matters to be held in the Republic of Panama during the week of 12 Jan. Included in the party will be members of the War Department Intelligence Department and a representative of A-2 Army Air Forces. Leaving the United States on 11 Jan. the group will return to this country via Puerto Rico.

Maj. F. McQuatters, WAC Staff Director, G-1 Section, Hqs., AGF, was released from active duty 6 Jan. On 15 January 1947, Major McQuatters will be appointed Director of Legislation and the Washington, D. C. Representative of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Lt. Col. Geraldine P. May has reported to take over Major McQuatters' assignment. Lieutenant Colonel May's former assignment was in the Office of the War Department Director, Personnel and Administration.

Lt. Col. Clifton V. Nooncaster, Ordnance Section, AGF, left Fort Monroe, Va., for the Detroit Arsenal 8 Jan. While at the Michigan Post, Colonel Nooncaster will attend a series of conferences on Ordnance Matters.

Currently on official business at Fifth Army Hqs., Chicago, Ill., Col. Richard Sears and Lt. Col. Rudolph K. Brunsvold, G-3 Section, will visit Camps Custer and Grayling, Mich., before returning to Fort Monroe, Va.

Finance Department—Col. Emmett J. Bean, FD, Chief, Administrative Management Division, Office of the Chief of Finance, returned to Washington last week after conferring with Col. Harry Foster, FD, Finance Officer, U. S. Army, San Francisco, Calif., on matters relating to Finance activities and Armed Forces Leave Act payments. Various Finance Offices, U. S. Army, throughout the country have processed a great percentage of leave claims received by them to date and efforts are being made to stimulate the filing of claims by eligible veterans who have not already done so in order to effectively utilize the services of personnel hired for this work. Colonel Bean also discussed audit matters while in San Francisco with Col. Carl E. Anderson, FD, Regional Auditor, San Francisco Regional Office, Army Audit Agency. Regional Audit Offices have been recently established throughout the various Army Areas and operate under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Finance.

Col. Carl Witche, FD, Finance Officer, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C. and Lt. Col. W. Leroy Bates, FD, Chief, Transportation and Commercial Accounts Branch, Receipts and Disbursements Division, Office of the Chief of Finance, attended an American Association of Railroads conference in Savannah, Georgia, last week. Maj. Fred R. Huston, FD, was Acting Chief during the absence of Colonel Bates from the Transportation and Commercial Accounts Branch.

Following his retirement from active service last week, Colonel Lester E. Gruber, former Chief, Accounts Division, Office of the Chief of Finance, and Mrs. Gruber left Washington last week for San Antonio, Texas, where they expect to make their home.

Transportation Corps—Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavey, Chief of Transportation, announced 7 Jan., that for the remainder of the winter, grain shipments to Germany, now centered principally at Albany, N. Y., will be concentrated in Gulf and East Coast Ports, in order to preclude shipping delays which otherwise might be occasioned by ice conditions in the Hudson River. The grain represents the Army's commitments for the overseas food program in Germany.

The New York Port of Embarkation, according to Maj. Gen. Ewart G. Plant, Port Commander, does not expect noticeable fluctuation in the number of troops brought home and in the amount of cargo shipped and received during the first three months of 1947. General Plant states that the activities of the Port generally stabilized themselves in 1946.

Col. Henry R. Johnson, Post Quartermaster for Camp Kilmer, N. J., for the past four years, this week turned over his duties to Lt. Col. Harry G. Roller and began preparations for his move to Yokohama, Japan, where he has been assigned by recent orders.

Adjutant General's Department—Retirements made as of 31 Dec. included Maj. Gen. Harold N. Gilbert, Brig. Gen. Lester S. Ostrander and Col. Daniel P. Poteet, (FA) AGD. Gen. Gilbert retired in grade while Gen. Ostrander and Col. Poteet retired as Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel, respectively.

Col. Norris A. Wimberley, Adjutant General of the 7th Army, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious service in the performance of outstanding services in the southwest Pacific area from 2 Feb. to 1 May, 1945. The presentation of the medal was made recently by Lt. Gen. O. W. Griswold, 7th Army commander, in a ceremony at Atlanta, Ga.

The 108th Machine Records Unit, commanded by Capt. Woodrow Lynch, has been commended by Col. C. W. Christenberry, Adjutant General of the 1st Army, for outstanding achievement in the reduction of sick leave of civilian employees.

Lt. Col. Ralph D. Foster, AGD, was the principal speaker at the President's Own Garrison of the Army and Navy Union at a meeting held at the American Legion Home in Washington, D. C., on 7 Jan. Col. Foster spoke on ways and means of increasing membership.

Army Chaplains Corps—The Chief of Chaplains, United States Army, Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Luther D. Miller will participate in the installation service of the presiding Bishop-elect of the Episcopal Church, Henry Knox Sherrill of the Diocese of Massachusetts. The installation is to be held at the Washington Cathedral, 14 Jan. at 3:00 p.m.

Chaplain Miller will be the Grand Marshal of the multiple processions, and will also be present in his capacity as an Honorary Canon of the Cathedral.

Recent visitors in the Office of the Chief of Chaplains include: Chaplain (Capt.) Maynard U. Vick, New York Port of Embarkation, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Chaplain (Capt.) Cromwell C. Cleveland, now on Terminal Leave, Paris, Ky.; Chaplain (Col.) Paul J. Maddox, presently on Temporary Duty in the Office of the Chief of Chaplains, Hq USFET, APO 757, c/o PM, N. Y. Chaplain (Capt.) William E. Powers, Graves Registration, IBT, APO 465, c/o PM, N. Y.; and Chaplain (Capt.) Warren E. Ferguson, ASU 3420, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Signal Corps—The Office of the Chief Signal Officer reports that the first group of Army Air Forces Air Weather Service personnel to be trained in the use of the newly-developed Cloud Height Finder by the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories Development Detachment has completed its initial course of instruction.

The equipment—Cellometer Set AN/GMQ-2 in Signal Corps nomenclature—is designed for measuring and recording the height of a cloud ceiling above the ground level which is data of vital importance to aircraft pilots. The set is able to detect and accurately record cloud ceilings up to 10,000 feet. The Signal Corps, using the Evans Signal Laboratory at Belmar, New Jersey, has been testing and experimenting with the set since 1945.

An opportunity to become "ham" radio operators and to obtain Class B radio licenses has been opened to military personnel at Fort Monmouth by the Fort Monmouth Amateur Radio Club. Classes in radio theory and radio code have been started which cover the subjects required by the Federal Communications Commission. Students will be permitted to start at any speed and work up to the minimum of 13 words per minute required by the FCC before licenses are issued.

It's just like home here: we had Aunt Jemima Pancakes this morning.

One heapin' forkful of those mouth waterin' Aunt Jemima Pancakes—and he feels like he's back home, with mother poppin' 'em on the griddle. For no matter who fixes Aunt Jemima Pancakes, they turn out plumb wonderful! If you want to see morale hit a new high—and fast, give them energizing, nourishing Aunt Jemima Pancakes. They're easy to digest as toast—and even easier to fix—just add milk or water. For a double treat, serve both kinds. For pancakes and waffles, get the red box of Aunt Jemima Ready-Mix, for buckwheats, get the yellow box.

FORT BLISS, TEX.
7 Jan. 1947

The Army's border post at Ft. Bliss played an important part in furthering friendly relations with our Mexican neighbors on 29 Dec. when troops headed by Maj. Gen. J. L. Homer, Commanding General of the Anti-aircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center, participated in the annual Mexico Day Celebration held on the International Bridge between El Paso and Juarez, Mexico.

The ceremony, part of the Southwestern Sun Carnival Festivities, opened when the Texas governor-elect, the governor of the Mexican state of Chihuahua, Mexican General Barrigute, General Homer and other civilian and military leaders briefly addressed the assembled guests and radio audience.

Following the opening ceremonies, American and Mexican troops approached the center of the bridge from their respective sides, and after an exchange of military courtesies, merged in two columns to march side by side through the Mexican city of Juarez.

General Homer was joined at the Bridge by Mexican General de Brigada Sebastian Barrigute Andrade, Commander of the Juarez garrison. The American and Mexican Generals, also marching side by side behind their respective colors, accompanied their troops on the parade amid the cheers and salutations of the thousands of American and Mexican spectators that thronged the Juarez streets.

Music for the parade was furnished alternately by the 62nd AGF Band and the Mexican Band. Some little difficulty was met in the changing tempos; the Mexicans march at 158 steps per minute as compared to the American's 120.

Accompanying General Homer on the Mexican goodwill parade were Brig. Gen. Robert M. Montague; Colonels Cyrus H. Searcy, Evans R. Crowell, H. A. McMorrow, and Capt. H. A. Hollowell, Lt. J. A. Snow and Lt. A. M. Huston, Aides-de-camp. As a special addition three West Point Cadets who were visiting Ft. Bliss over the holidays, joined the American commander's staff.

Obituaries

Brig. Gen. Charles P. George, USA-Ret., died suddenly of a heart attack at his home, 510 Garrity Road, San Antonio, Tex., 30 Dec. 1946.

This was the fourth attack General George had suffered, the first being while on desert training in 1943. At that time he was commanding the 76th Field Artillery Brigade. After being returned to duty from Brooke General Hospital, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., he was on duty commanding several groups of Heavy Field Artillery at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., Ft. Bragg, N. C., Camp Campbell, Ky., and Camp Forrest, Tenn. This involved much travel and inspection. He suffered a second attack in August, 1944, at Ft. Bragg, and was returned to Brooke General Hospital. He suffered a third attack in December, 1944 and was retired in October, 1945.

In addition to being an outstanding Field Artilleryman, he was an expert horseman, one of the best the army has ever produced. He was a member of two Olympic teams, riding in France and Holland. He also rode very successfully in the London Horse Show, the Canadian National Horse Show, as well as many times in the National Horse Shows in New York and Washington, and in many of the larger horse shows in this country. He was an official at the Olympic games at Los Angeles, and for three years was in charge of the Field Artillery Horse Show team at Ft. Sill, Okla.

He was buried in the Post Cemetery, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., the afternoon 31 Dec. The pallbearers were: Gen. J. W. Wainwright, Lt. Gen. H. G. Brees, Maj. Gen. I. P. Swift, Brig. Gen. B. C. Lockwood, Brig. Gen. A. McIntyre, Col. N. E. Bailey, Col. C. O. Thomas, jr., Mr. Harry Harrison, Col. O. I. Holman, Mr. R. N. Gresham.

Mrs. Helen Duncan Mayes, widow of Col. James J. Mayes, JAGD, USA, who died at Springfield, Mo., 3 Jan., had a wide acquaintance among army personnel. Her funeral and burial beside her husband took place at Springfield 5 Jan.

Weddings and Engagements

Capt. and Mrs. James M. Hicks, U. S. Navy, announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty Ann, to Charles Dixon Edmunds, jr., son of Capt. and Mrs. Charles Dixon Edmunds, USN. Captain and Mrs. Hicks and family are now residing at Quarters Q-17, Mare Island Naval Shipyard, Vallejo, Calif.

Col. Horace Benjamin Smith, former White House aide, and Mrs. Smith have announced the engagement of her daughter, Henrietta Virginia Vandergrift Summerlin, to Lt. (jg) Hugh Laurington Clarke Stevens, 3rd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Stevens of Cynwyd, Pa. The wedding is planned for April. The bride-to-be is the daughter of the late George T. Summerlin, jr., and granddaughter of Mr. George Summerlin, former Chief of Protocol and Mr. and Mrs. George Julien Zolnay of New York. Her great-grandfather, Gen. John A. Johnston was one time District Commissioner.

Lt. Stevens now stationed at the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., is a member of Charter Club of Princeton and the Princeton Club of New York.

The marriage of Miss Morgie Howard, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Thomas R. Howard of Washington to Mr. Fred Charles Lepick, jr., of San Antonio took place at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel in Washington at 4 p.m. 27 Dec. The chapel was gay with poinsettias and palms and lighted by tall candelabras. Chaplain Luther D. Miller performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of ivory satin fell into a long train and was adorned at the neck by pearl clips and with a wide seed pearl girdle at the waist. Her long veil of illusion was caught by a coronet of lace.

FINANCE
Financial Digest

President Truman's State of the Union message, delivered to Congress 8 Jan., offered a formula for reducing labor strife which might be summarized as follows:

Legislation preventing jurisdictional strikes. Extension of Federal facilities for assisting collective bargaining. Broadened social security legislation. Formation of a committee to investigate labor-management relations.

The President said:

"It is up to industry not only to hold the line on existing prices, but to make reductions whenever profits justify such action."

"It is up to labor to refrain from pressing for unjustified wage increases that will force increases in the price level."

Representative Buck, (R., N.Y.) speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Banker's Club in New York City 7 Jan., predicted legislation specifically designed to curb labor, reduce individual income and corporate taxes, and prohibit portal-to-portal pay suits will be enacted by the 80th Congress.

President Truman also delivered to Congress this week his first economic report, in which he warned that price cuts were necessary and excessive wage demands by labor must be refrained from to prevent the nation from being plunged into a recession in production and employment.

The 1947 production of goods, the report said, will be higher than that of last year, but the price increases during the last half of 1946 have so reduced purchasing power that there is danger that these goods will remain on the market.

"During this year," the report said, "the underlying favorable factors are strong enough to maintain high prosperity."

Summarizing unfavorable factors, President Truman said:

"But this year brings us face to face with maladjustments and unfavorable possibilities which, if not corrected or prevented, could cause a recession in production and employment."

Economic goals for the year, the report said, are an employment rate as high or slightly higher than in 1946, production about five per cent higher, and purchasing power higher than at present for the purpose of absorbing the increased supply of goods.

MERCHANT MARINE
Merchant Marine

The President, in his budget message to Congress yesterday, estimated that the Maritime Commission will require appropriations for the fiscal year 1948 totaling $5,920,000.

This will be divided between the Maritime training fund—$5,470,000—and the State marine schools—$450,000. Prior balances estimated in the amount of $754,088,084 will be available in 1947, and $27,003,141 in 1948.

Of the Maritime Commission, President Truman said:

"Construction fund.—Primary responsibility of the United States Maritime Commission in 1947-48 is to restore private operation in accordance with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936. This requires ship sales and charters, supported by reconversion of war-built vessels and operating differential subsidies. The Budget also provides for a limited amount of new construction of specialized vessels to round out the peacetime American merchant marine, and for administrative expense, surplus property disposal, maintenance of shipyard facilities, operation of warehouses, and preservation of unrequired vessels in reserve fleets, as required by the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946.

"Cash and contract authority will be available from prior year balances and receipts for the above-enumerated responsibilities."

With the convening of the 80th Congress, legislation was introduced by Rep. Clarence E. Kilburn providing for Congressional authorization of the long-proposed St. Lawrence seaway and power project.

The bill was identical with one approved by the Senate Foreign Relations committee in the last Congress. In a statement accompanying the bill, Rep. Kilburn listed what he described as three "important and compelling reasons" for prompt action:

"It will result in greatly reduced transportation costs in an area inhabited by more than 40,000,000 people; make possible the generation of a tremendous amount of cheap electricity without any direct cost to the nation; and provide tens of thousands of jobs for veterans and other workers."

The Maritime Commission discontinued underwriting marine and war risk insurance, effective 31 Dec. As almost all insurance required by American shipping interests is now being supplied by commercial markets, no serious disturbance was expected to result from this action.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Army and Navy Journal

January 11, 1947

467

THE Coast Guard budget for the fiscal year 1948, as submitted to Congress yesterday by the President, calls for appropriations of $132,904,400. This is an increase of $8,964,602 over 1947.

In a statement explaining his budget, President Truman said:

"The United States Coast Guard, which had operated as a part of the Navy during the war, was transferred back to Treasury effective January 1, 1946, by Executive Order 9666. The amount requested for 1948, as compared with funds available for the current fiscal year, represents an increase of about 7 per cent which is necessary primarily for increased retirement pay, equipment replacement and repairs, and supplies and materials for current operating needs."

The 1948 budget also estimated that the Coast Guard would require a total of $123,939,798 for operations in the current fiscal year.

The Commandant, Admiral Joseph F. Farley, opened the Great Lakes Licensed Officers Winter Forum this week with a brief talk entitled "What the Commandant sees in Great Lakes Shipping."

The Forum was held 7-8 Jan. in the Carter Hotel in Cleveland. Commodore Halbert C. Sheppard followed Admiral Farley with a talk on the new regulations affecting Great Lakes Shipping, and led a question-and-answer period.

The Cleveland Aids-to-Navigation officer, Comdr. Brallier, discussed proposed aids to navigation, and also submitted to informal questioning.

Lt. Comdr. Guy Ottinger spoke at the afternoon session on 8 Jan. on "Radar, Wind, and Weather," as well as "Beacons for Radar."

Also in attendance but listed only as observers were Rear Adm. Ellis Reed-Hill, Engineer-in-Chief; and Capt. C. H. Petersen, chief of the Aids to Navigation Division at Coast Guard Headquarters.

The Coast Guard, along with other exhibitors, set up an exhibit. Featuring as its theme "Coast Guard Service on the Great Lakes," the display included electric flashing buoy lanterns, a cut-away model of an American Gas Accumulator Company acetylene buoy and lamp, a class B radio beacon, a radio beacon chart, pictures of Great Lakes radar applications, ice-breaking pictures, and features on Search and Rescue.

Industrial Preparedness

Leading manufacturers of small arms and ammunition have given unanimous backing to a continued industrial preparedness program, the War Department reports.

The industrialists pledged their support to Maj. Gen. Everett S. Hughes, Chief of Ordnance, at a meeting held in General Hughes' office under the sponsorship of the Army Ordnance Association and presided over by C. K. Davis, president of the Remington Arms Company.

The meeting was also attended by Brig. Gen. J. L. Holman, chief of the Industrial Division of the Ordnance Department; Brig. Gen. E. E. MacMorland, commanding officer of the Frankford Arsenal, and Ordnance Department small arms experts.

Industrialists present included Graham H. Anthony, president of Colt's Patent Fire Arms Corp.; E. O. Hunt, vice president of General Motors; John M. Olin, president of Olin Industries; C. Stewart Comeaux, Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers Institute.

Sports Front

NOW that emotional thoughts have given way to rational ones on the subject, let's delve a little deeper into the Army-Notre Dame business.

There has been much talk about Army quitting while it's ahead. In other words, after two smashing victories and a tie, the West Point authorities wanted to get out from under while the getting was good. After all, Blanchard and Davis were gone, and Notre Dame was already being conceded next year's national championship. Wouldn't this be a good time to terminate the series and save West Point's face?

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Army just doesn't do things that way. But since the peculiar genius of football fans who have never been near a college campus might think we were talking through our garrison cap, here are a couple of random facts to substantiate our point of view.

Army is not quitting while it's ahead. The series presently stands at 22 wins for Notre Dame as against 7 for the Cadets, with three ties.

Army is not afraid of being licked, by Notre Dame or any other football team. For many years throughout the 1930s, the Irish ruled the gridiron roost, while Army had below-average football material for a school its size. Despite trouncing after trouncing, there was never any thought of calling a halt.

Army does not go in for face-saving. If it did, why would the New York Giants baseball team journey to West Point every spring to hand the Cadet nine a thorough pasting?

On the other side of the fence, there are those who hall the termination of hostilities as a major step in eliminating the gambling evil from college football. True, it is a step in the right direction, but, we fear, hardly more than a drop in the bucket.

The gambling virus has swept the country. Today there are far too many people who, if deprived of all other outlets, would bet on cockroach races. The only thing the cancellation will prevent is the friendly five dollar bet between two sincere adherents of the respective schools, and that's not the type of gambling which is threatening to undermine our entire sports structure.

Of course the gambling influence had more than a little to do with the decision. Notre Dame is primarily a religious school, not a football school, and religion and gambling don't mix. As for Army—well, one of our true bulwarks of national defense would hardly lay itself open to even the merest breath of suspicion.

Suspending the series, however, will make a very small dent indeed in the gambling problem. But it will remove two of our most upright collegiate institutions from the unfortunate position of catering to tinhorns.

Last Wednesday was a bad day for the two academy basketball teams. Navy bowed, for the first time this season, to a strong George Washington quintet, which has lost only to Seton Hall. The score was 43-38. Army, meanwhile, had its hands full with a lightly regarded Swarthmore five, barely managing to eke out a 43-42 win.

When you move, notify the Army and Navy Journal of your change of address so you will not miss any issues.
